

From: Betsaida Alcantara/DC/USEPA/US
Sent: 4/10/2012 10:48:02 AM
To: Bloomgren.David@epamail.epa.gov
CC: Gilfillan.Brendan@epamail.epa.gov
Subject: Dimock

STUCK INSIDE OF DIMOCK WITH THE MEMPHIS BLUES AGAIN: The natural gas industry declared victory after EPA last week found no cause for immediate action in Dimock, Pa., where residents accuse Cabot Oil and Gas of contaminating groundwater supplies — but at least one environmental group says the agency misread its own data. “The preliminary results EPA Region 3 has released so far show that 20 percent of wells tested contain dangerous concentrations of methane,” says Water Defense’s Claire Sandberg. “When the water that flows into your pipes has levels of methane that high, you are essentially living inside a bomb.” State Impact Pennsylvania:
<http://bit.ly/ljDI1t><<http://bit.ly/ljDI1t>>.